SIXTH SCHEDULE

Code of Practice – Deer Stalking

Coillte require every deer stalker to exercise the rights of recreational deer stalking in a safe, humane, and responsible manner, in accordance with the conditions of the licence agreement as well as all relevant legislation, directives, standards, guidelines and codes of practice that may be in place.

Consideration for others

Every stalker should respect the landowner's property and their wishes by complying at all times with the conditions of the licence agreement.

All responsible stalkers should have the utmost consideration for forest workers, other forest users and neighbouring landowners, and avoid causing them any undue disturbance or nuisance.

Safety

Firearms used for deer stalking are lethal weapons, capable of killing or causing serious injury over considerable distances. Safety is paramount and must be foremost in the minds of all stalkers when handling and using firearms.

No shot should ever be fired if there is the slightest doubt about safety

All stalkers should have and use approved hearing protection and other Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) appropriate to the activity. Where more than one hunter is hunting in the same area, high visibility vests should be worn at all times.

All stalkers should familiarise themselves fully with the hunting area and be constantly aware of the location of roads, pathways, rights of way, buildings, and areas regularly frequented by the public and never fire in their vicinity or in their direction.

All stalkers should obtain agreement from the forest manager at least 48 hours in advance of their intention to hunt the lands. Notice of a stalkers intention is not sufficient.

All stalkers should be constantly vigilant for other forest users and forest operations, and be prepared to immediately cease hunting in areas where such activities are observed.

All stalkers must comply with warning notices and signs around forestry work sites and never enter such a work site.

It must be remembered that the sound of a discharging firearm can itself present a potential hazard to other users of the forest, for example, pony trekkers.

While hunting alone, a mobile telephone should be carried at all times, and / or arrangements made with a third party to confirm their safe return.

A first aid kit should be carried in the vehicles of all hunters.

All stalkers should display clearly prohibition notices at all gates and entrances to the stalking area before commencing stalking and remove them on leaving the area. Such notices should be a minimum size of 400mm wide and 600mm high, printed on a white background in the format illustrated in Fig 1,

Fig 1. Format of Prohibition Notice

Respect for the Quarry

The highest respect must be afforded to all quarry animals.

It should be the objective of every responsible hunter to properly identify and ensure the clean, humane kill, and efficient recovery of all deer shot.

Hunter Competence

Prior to hunting live quarry all hunters should develop their skills and competencies fully to achieve this objective. All stalkers should aim to improve their knowledge and proficiency in all aspects of deer stalking and in particular their understanding of the ecology of the deer and their environment.. All stalkers intending to hunt on Coillte lands must demonstrate their competence in deer hunting by satisfactorily completing a certified hunter competence assessment programme approved by Coillte

Through regular practice on approved target ranges, all stalkers should maintain their proficiency with their firearm. Remember, the zeroing of rifles or other forms of target practice are not permitted on Coillte lands.

Legislation

It is the responsibility of every stalker to familiarise themselves fully with all legislation relating to their sport and adhere to it at all times. Deer may only be hunted during the statutory Open Seasons on Coillte lands.

Insurance

All stalkers must have adequate third party public liability insurance (as specified in Section 12 of the Licence agreement) with a minimum cover of €2,540,000.00 for any one accident.

Remember: - No level of insurance can replace safe firearm handling and use

Firearms and Ammunition

All stalkers must only use a licensed firearm of a calibre legally approved for killing deer, and appropriate ammunition with a bullet type designed to expand/deform on impact. It is Coillte's recommendation that a minimum calibre of .240 inches and minimum muzzle energy of 1,700 foot-pounds should be used for killing deer. (ie .243 Win using a bullet weighing 100 grains).

All rifles and sights must be correctly "zeroed" or "sighted-in" for a given range. This should be checked on an approved target range on a regular basis, particularly after the firearm receives a service, adjustment or other form of interference, after it is dropped or knocked, or following any un-typically "wild" shot. No responsible stalker should ever use a rifle if there is any doubt over its accuracy.

No responsible stalker should commence stalking without carrying a sufficient number of rounds of ammunition (minimum of 5 rounds) to allow follow-up shots to be taken if required to dispatch a wounded animal.

All firearms should be checked on a regular basis by a competent gunsmith to prevent accidents as a result of faulty equipment

Coillte do not permit deerstalkers to have in their possession or to use any pistols/handguns on their lands.

Taking the Shot

All responsible stalkers should be capable of properly identifying their quarry and only selecting those animals for culling that comply with the requirements of the landowners annual cull programme.

When culling female deer, Coillte require all stalkers to cull all accompanying juvenile animals BEFORE adult females to avoid the orphaning of dependant calves / fawns.

Before taking a shot, all stalkers must ensure that the shot to be fired is in a safe direction, with a solid backstop behind the target, which is clearly visible. Thicket trees and scrub must never be considered as adequate to stop a bullet, nor, should it be assumed that these areas are unoccupied.

A clear, uninterrupted view of the target animal should be obtained, ensuring that there are no obstacles such as twigs, grass or wire fencing in front of the target which may deflect the shot, or other deer behind the target animal, which may be injured by the exiting bullet.

The location of the target animal and its proximity to nearby land features should be carefully noted before the shot is taken.

No shot should ever be taken at a deer unless the stalker is 100% satisfied that they are capable of killing it cleanly and humanly. Long distance shots or other "trick" shots should be confined to the target range and never be attempted on live quarry.

If there is any doubt, the shot must not be taken

To minimise the risk of wounding the animal, Coillte highly recommend the stalker to shoot a standing broadside animal, through the heart and lungs. A deer should never be shot in the head or while it is moving, unless it is taken as a follow-up shot on a wounded animal.

After the shot

All stalkers should be capable of determining appropriate follow-up action by observing the reaction of the deer to the shot. In the event that a follow-up shot is required, the rifle should be immediately re-loaded.

Particular care should be taken if the animal drops instantly on the spot as a reaction to a "chest shot" through the heart and lungs.

All shot animals should be approached cautiously and if required they should be dispatched immediately and humanely.

If a shot deer is lost from the stalkers view following the shot, a period of at least 10 minutes should be left before following up. The point where that animal was standing when the shot was fired should be carefully examined for sign of hair, bone and blood, which will indicate where the animal was hit.

It should always be assumed that the animal is hit following the shot, and every effort should be made to recover it.

All deer stalkers on Coillte's lands are required to have immediate access to a dog trained and competent in tracking wounded / lost deer, to assist in the rapid location and dispatch of any wounded deer.

Carcass handling and inspection

All stalkers should be familiar with all relevant game meat regulations and ensure all deer carcasses destined for human consumption are handled in accordance with them.

Every stalker must be capable of eviscerating (gralloching) and undertaking a field inspection of a deer carcass. Any abnormalities or other sign indicating that the animal may have contracted a notifiable disease must be reported immediately to the landowner and other relevant authorities.

All responsible stalkers should carefully record detailed information relating to each animal culled. Such information would include:- Date, location shot, species, sex, age, body weight, body condition, reproductive status, trophy quality, diseases/parasites, etc.. Such information should be available to the landowner.

All stalkers should have and use appropriate Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) for the handling and transportation of deer carcasses.

No stalker should display or have cause to display any carcass in a manner that may cause offence to other forest users. All stalkers must ensure that all viscera, and other body parts removed from the carcass are disposed of properly in accordance with all relevant regulations and legislation, and that these are not left discarded on the landowners lands. In particular no offal or gralloch should be deposited within 30 meters of any drain, watercourse or be left exposed in any way.

All deer carcasses intended for sale, must only be sold through a licensed and approved wild game processing facility.
